The killing of a five year old albino girl in Lusaka recently has raised concern among members of the albino community in the country.

Albino Association of Zambia has termed the incident to be ritual killing.

Association Director, John Chiti has disclosed that the girl had hair missing on one side of the head.

He has condemned the killing saying it has sent fears among albinos.

The association has called on Government to intervene in the ritual killing before the scourge escalates.

And the Zambia Federation of the Blind and Mathew 25 Ministries have also joined in condemning the killing of the albino girl.

Shit! This is really a big cock-up. Where is your law now, Zambians? Let the czech tourists go home finally and resolve your own disarray and stupidity! Well, be sure you have lost your income from tourism for long time. Your country is not as safe as you present it.	scream - December 8, 2011 11:56
note:- that the children denounced as 'child witches' are innocent little children, but in a country where even birds are murdered because of being suspected of witchcraft, anyone labled by 'fake pastors' young & old will risks physical and emotional abuse by ignorant savages.	Magic Bird - December 8, 2011 08:45

we have too many tanzanians staying in zambia illegally. Most of them have grocery shops and most of them use juju, infact the ritual killings of albinos have been so rampant in tanzania, i hear that its the origin of this ritual. Those of you who have experienced having a shop next to one of a tanzanians may attest to the fact that you start to experience unknown losses and a steep and abnormal decline in business.
